Sumida Shelter Information System

Evacuation Procedures

If a large earthquake strikes and there is danger of buildings collapsing or fire spreading nearby, evacuate immediately. To ensure that you can evacuate calmly, please read the following to learn about appropriate evacuation procedures.

Large Earthquake Strikes!

Q Is there any danger of buildings collapsing or fire spreading nearby that would make your home unsafe?

Yes

Evacuate to a temporary gathering place

Once there, share any information about the situation with others so you are prepared to act.

Note: When leaving your home, first turn off gas valves and electric breakers. Only bring necessary items such as emergency supplies when evacuating.

No

Remain at home (At-Home Evacuation)

Monitor the situation carefully and stay alert for any new danger, such as aftershocks and spreading fires.

Q Is the fire spreading toward your home or a local temporary gathering place?

Yes

Evacuate to an evacuation site

Stay at the evacuation site until the dangers of fire is gone. (Excluding safe districts)

No

Stay at home or a temporary gathering place

Q Is there damage to your home, making it impossible to stay there?

Yes

Evacuate to a designated shelter.

No

Stay at home

Temporary gathering places

These locations are safe places to monitor the disaster from, and to use as a gathering place before going to an evacuation site. Parks and schools are often used as such places.

Evacuation site

These locations are safe to evacuate to when a fire is spreading. Large parks and other locations with minimal risk of fire spreading are typically designated as such places.

Designated shelters

These are locations where evacuees who cannot return home can live temporarily. Municipal elementary and junior high schools are often used for this purpose.

Safe districts (Kinshicho district)

These are areas where widespread evacuation is unnecessary, since the risk of fire spreading is low due to advanced fireproofing practices in the community.

List of temporary meeting places, evacuation sites (stayed-in areas), designated shelters (by town councils and residents' associations)

To prepare for disasters, please confirm your local temporary meeting places, evacuation sites, and designated shelters on a regular basis.
